A note for sharing this story

Wren offers help and then asks to change a job that feels too heavy. Speaking up, asking a trusted grown-up and agreeing on a manageable task are responsible choices. Do not ask children to lift heavy containers or manage plant care alone. The activities are drawing invitations; no real watering is required. A grown-up can read this aloud. Point, speak or draw; writing is optional. Optional extensions invite explaining, comparing and changing a choice. No one has to share a personal experience. Colour examples are separate and optional.

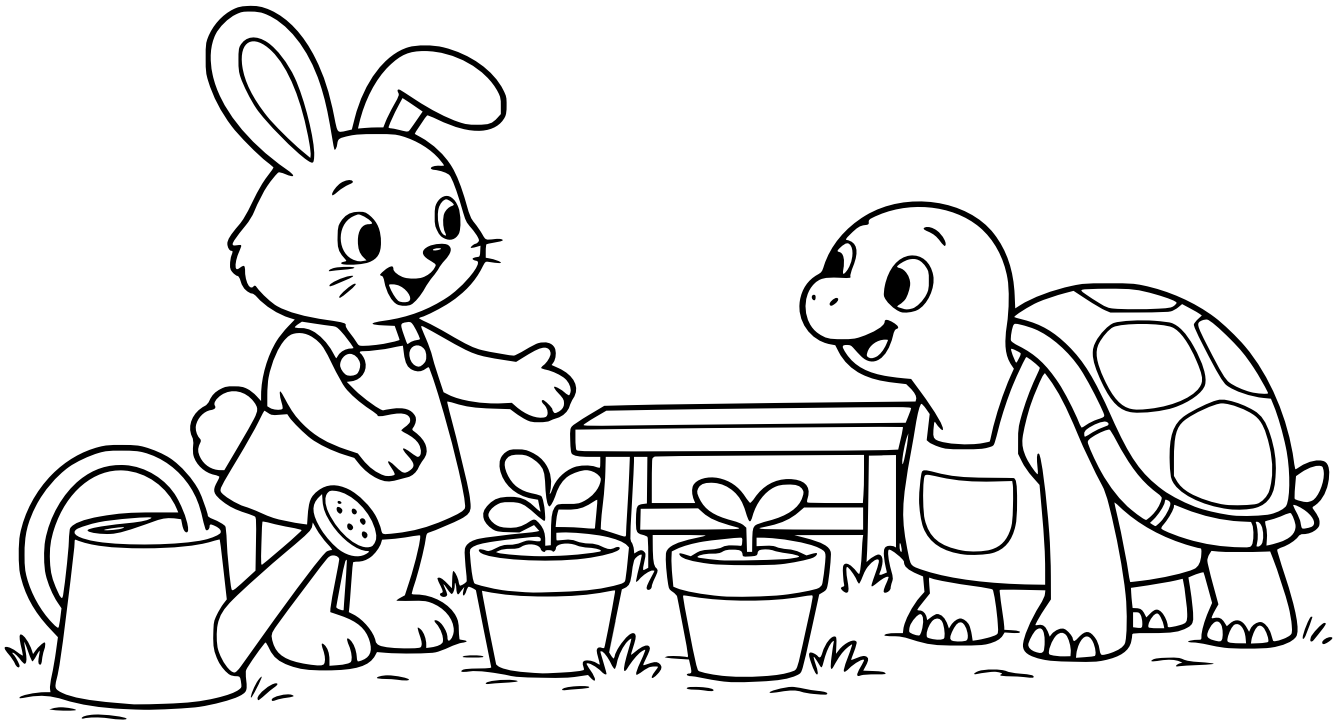
Using these pages

Print this monochrome book at actual size on A4 paper. Keep the colour guide on screen or print only the pages you want. Try any colours; the guide is one possible interpretation.

The separate guide repeats the same figures with flat fills. It does not fill the open activity areas or set a correct answer.

Original AI-assisted story and artwork. The main illustrations are traced vector artwork. No learning outcome or curriculum approval is promised.

Two little pots



Two little pots waited beside the garden bench. “I can help with these,” Wren told Moss. Moss was glad of the offer. They agreed to look at the soil together before adding water. Helping began with knowing what the job needed.

Invent a helpful plan

Draw a pretend garden job and a character who might help. Add a helper or a smaller part if you wish. There is no need to copy Wren’s task.

A grown-up can read this aloud. Point, speak or draw; writing is optional.

Optional next step: Explain what your character would want to know before agreeing.